Subject: Important Update The Impact of Tariffs

Dear Valued Customer,

We want to keep you informed about upcoming changes in U.S. trade policy that may impact the cost of industrial metals, including steel, ductile iron, copper, and copper alloy rod products. Discussions at the federal level indicate that new or increased tariffs on imports could be introduced under Section 232, which is currently under review.

While the full impact of these tariffs is still unfolding, they are expected to influence the overall cost of our products directly and indirectly. Directly, tariffs could have an impact on imported products that we do not have the ability to produce in our facilities as well as alloy costs from suppliers. These specific products will be priced to reflect those tariffs should they be implemented. Indirectly, tariffs have the potential to impact a range of imports from raw materials and tool steel to lubricants and chemicals used in the production process. It is impossible to assess the impact of those tariffs at this time, but they will undoubtedly have an impact on the cost of production.

Rest assured, we are closely monitoring government updates and supply chain costs. We will keep you informed of any significant changes that may affect our products or pricing. Our goal is to maintain transparency and help you plan accordingly.

We deeply value our partnership and remain committed to managing costs where possible.

Best regards,

Tom Eller
